

Non-Executive Director

About Circular PV Alliance

Circular PV Alliance (CPVA) is a non-profit industry body committed to building a sustainable future for Australia's solar industry through a circular economy. The current board of directors is a highly collaborative, dynamic, diverse group that has taken a proactive approach to creating innovative, best practice solutions for the industry. In 2024 CPVA launched CPVA Certified®, an industry certification that enables scalable and transparent pathways for solar energy circularity practices.

CPVA is intentionally apolitical and uses evidence to inform decision-making and advocacy. We work across many industries including renewable energy, circular economy, resource recovery and critical minerals. Our focus is on delivering value, working closely with project developers, local government and at the community scale. We have a very unique ecosystem backed by passionate, high-calibre members with different strengths aiming to enable more sustainable industry practices. Through CPVA's commitment to collaboration, evidence and quality, we have built a strong reputation within Australia and internationally.

Position Overview

CPVA is at a critical point in its evolution and is seeking to appoint 2 or 3 new Non-Executive Board Members. These new appointments are essential to ensure CPVA leverages its strengths and position as a leader in the circular PV economy to drive CPVA's ongoing commercial and operational sustainability. These positions are voluntary and largely advisory in nature. This is the chance to roll-up your sleeves and get involved as much as you would like - all energy and effort is welcome and highly appreciated.

Key Responsibilities

- Advise on commercial strategies, partnerships, and revenue models to support CPVA's long-term sustainability.
- Advocate for CPVA in relevant networks and forums, and provide connections and introductions that result in membership growth and increased uptake of CPVA Certified®.
- Support effective engagement and connections with industry stakeholders including manufacturers, recyclers, policymakers, government, businesses and other industry organisations.
- Provide strategic oversight on CPVA's growth, particularly in scaling CPVA Certified® nationally and internationally, and other strategic opportunities.

You can hear our CPVA Certified® from our customer in this link.

What's In It For You

As a Non-Executive Director at CPVA, you have the opportunity to truly lead and drive change in the emerging circular economy for solar energy. CPVA is breaking new ground to develop solutions and best practice outcomes for the industry. You will be at the forefront of innovation and new thinking to deliver practical and tangible value back to stakeholders and build your own skillset in a vibrant circular economy organisation. In a nutshell, you will get to

- Shape the future of sustainable solar in Australia and beyond.
- Collaborate with thought leaders in environment, technology, and policy.
- Gain board experience in a dynamic, fast-evolving sector.
- Help build a practical, scalable model for circular economy implementation in the transforming energy sector.

Who We're Looking For

An extensive network of industry contacts and the ability to build new relationships is essential. Experience building and scaling business, commercial acumen, good communication and a positive attitude is also important. Previous board experience, though useful, is not essential. People with diverse backgrounds and skillsets are encouraged to apply. The Board recognises that people interested may only have limited time available. This is perfect - we are looking for people who can make an impact with limited resources. You must have a Company Directors ID.
