MEDIA RELEASE FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Circular PV Alliance enters next chapter of growth and impact with appointment of new CEO

Circular PV Alliance (CPVA) today announced the appointment of John Collie as Chief Executive Officer, marking a planned transition into the organisation's next phase of growth and impact.

The appointment reflects CPVA's evolution from a founder-led initiative into an established, delivery-focused organisation, with an increasing emphasis on commercial durability, capability uplift and national scale.

CPVA Chair and inaugural CEO, Megan Jones, said the transition represents a natural progression for the organisation as it builds on strong foundations established since its inception.

"CPVA was created to catalyse a new circular economy for solar energy in Australia. With that foundation now firmly in place, we are entering a new chapter focused on scaling delivery, strengthening capability and embedding commercial sustainability across our work," Ms Jones said.

"John brings the experience and commercial acumen needed to guide CPVA into and through this next phase, while continuing to build on the momentum already achieved. This is a really exciting time for the organisation. I am confident in handing the reins over to John and the Board is fully committed to supporting his success in this role."

Mr Collie said he was excited to join CPVA at a pivotal moment in its development.

"CPVA has established itself as a credible and influential voice across industry and government. The opportunity now is to translate that into enduring programs, stronger market mechanisms and scalable national impact," he said.

"I look forward to working with the Board, members and partners to build the systems, partnerships and commercial pathways needed to support a truly circular solar industry."

The leadership transition signals CPVA's move from its founding phase into a new era of structured growth. CPVA will continue to work with industry, government and local communities to enable a circular economy for solar energy, capturing value from end-of-life materials, supporting regional economies and strengthening Australia's renewable energy and resource recovery sectors.
